D6 Family Ministry Journals Volumes 1-8

Category: Christian Discipleship, Christian Education, Academic Journal

Purpose: The purpose of the Southwestern D6 Family Ministry Journal is to support the thinking and practices of parenting in Christian homes, in family ministry in the local church, and in parachurch settings that reflect God's intent for generational discipleship as presented in Deuteronomy 6 and other biblical texts. This purpose is achieved by the publication of academic peer-reviewed articles along with a limited selection of practitioner insights and book reviews on recent family ministry titles. The journal is primarily intended for two audiences: (1) an academic community of professors and students in institutions of higher learning who are committed to the development of a new generation of Christian ministers and community leaders and (2) those professionals who are already serving in local church and parachurch settings. The Journal hopes to facilitate discussion and learning among both groups.

Family Ministry and the Church: A Leader's Guide for Ministry Through Families

by Chris Shirley, Ph.D. (2018)

Category: Christian Discipleship, Christian Education, Christian Living

Purpose:

In my search for family ministry textbooks, I find there is a need for a balance between parent-equipping and family-strengthening topics. Family Ministry and the Church is my response to the need for a book that addresses the many theological and practical facets of family ministry and is relevant to present and future church leaders. The intended audience is those who either are training for ministry leadership or are current leaders: pastors, age-group ministers, and volunteer ministry leaders.

This book is meant to fill in one of the gaps I have experienced that still remains among the people most committed to family ministry. The purpose of this book is to provide a wide range of new approaches and patterns for each of your church's ministries. These ideas are structured around what I believe to be the two key dynamics in faith-at-home ministry: family-as-church and church-as-family.

Arminian and Baptist: Explorations in a Theological Tradition

by J. Matthew Pinson, Ed.D. (2015)

Category: Christian Theology

Purpose:

Over the past couple of decades, I have written a number of essays on this sort of Arminianism and how Arminian Baptists may locate themselves within the Christian tradition. I trust that the bringing together of all these essays into one volume will be of help to those who wish to understand the Arminian Baptist theological tradition and the unique stream of Arminian theology associated with it, thus complementing a growing body of literature from this theological vantage point.

Author bio:

J. Matthew Pinson is president of Welch College in Gallatin, Tennessee. He holds a master's degree from Yale and a doctorate from Vanderbilt and has authored or edited several books, including Four Views on Eternal Security and A Free Will Baptist Handbook. He lives in the Nashville area with his wife, Melinda, and their children, Anna and Matthew.

Book Summary:

In this book, Dr. J. Matthew Pinson presents a collection of historical-theological essays from the vantage point of a variety of Arminianism coming to be known as Reformed Arminianism. These essays describe the contours of the theology of the seventeenth-century English General Baptists Thomas Helwys and Thomas Grantham, showing their kinship with the thought of Jacobus Arminius and the ways they diverged from thinkers such as John Smyth, John Goodwin, and John Wesley. Unlike these latter thinkers, Helwys and Grantham emphasized more Reformed understandings of the meaning of sin and salvation. This is seen most clearly in their doctrines of total depravity, penal substitutionary atonement, the imputation of the active and passive obedience of Christ, and progressive sanctification. These doctrines produced a way of looking at perseverance and apostasy that emphasizes perseverance through faith alone rather than remaining in a state of grace through works and penitence.

Endorsements:

Russell Moore, Ph.D.—“I thank God for the resurgence of grace-oriented, gospel-focused Arminianism represented in this book. This is an Arminianism with a deep sense of radical human depravity, the sovereign initiative of God, penal substitutionary atonement, and the imputation of the active and passive obedience of Christ to the believer. We may sometimes disagree on the ‘how’ and the ‘when’ of salvation, but we agree on the ‘what’ and the ‘Who.’”

F. Leroy Forlines—“I highly recommend this book. Most Arminians will encounter some surprises here. I also recommend it to Calvinists. Our first obligation to those with whom we disagree is to find out what they are actually saying. If this happens, Arminianism will be given a new face in the theological world.”

Grace, Faith, Free Will: Contrasting Views of Salvation: Calvinism & Arminianism

by Robert E. Picirilli, Ph.D. (2002)

Category: Free Will & Determinism, Soteriology, Christian Theology, Free Will & Determinism Philosophy

Purpose:

Dr. Picirilli reclaims the original views of Arminius and his defenders. By writing this book, Dr. Picirilli wishes to contribute to the contemporary renewal of discussion about the issues that have divided Calvinism and Arminianism since the Reformation. Additionally, he wants to draw debates back to fundamental issues and help those on each side to understand the opposing views from inside.

He has several published books, booklets, and articles in denominational publications and theological journals. Since 1983, he has served as the general editor for The Randall House Bible Commentary series.

Book Summary:

The author renews the discussion of issues that have divided Calvinism and Arminianism since the Reformation. Although he presents both classic Calvinism and Arminianism to help readers intelligently decide for themselves, Dr. Picirilli unashamedly advocates a very specific form of Arminianism as the best resolution of the tensions between the two doctrinal positions. He presents a "Reformation Arminianism" that defends total depravity, the sovereignty of God to control all things for the certain accomplishment of His will, God's perfect foreknowledge of, and the certainty of, all future events—including the free, moral choices of human beings—the penal satisfaction view of the atonement, salvation by grace through faith and not by works—from beginning to end—and apostasy that cannot be remedied.

Book Summary: Discipleship is a great read for those who have grappled with questions like: What does it mean to be a disciple of Jesus Christ? Dr. Picirilli provides practical answers and applications for the reader through an exhaustive study of what the New Testament writers said about the requirements for salvation. Alan Stanley—"If I could list five questions that the church needs to focus on today, this would certainly be one of them: what does it mean to have faith in Jesus Christ? Many Christians speak of faith as though it were either a thing of the past or a belief about Jesus as if He were a doctrine. But those who have that kind of faith invariably admit to a deep-seated feeling of disappointment with their Christianity. So is it possible that our familiarity with the term faith has blinded us to its real meaning and how it is to function in our daily lives? Robert Picirilli thinks so. To that end he has produced a survey of the New Testament that shows how faith alone simply believes and responds to God's commands and promises. Readers will find this book both helpful and clarifying."

J. Matthew Pinson, Ed.D.—"In the classic, engaging prose we have come to expect from Dr. Picirilli, he makes in this book as compelling a case as I have ever read for the fact that discipleship and sanctification are the necessary biblical accompaniments of true justification. If church leaders will read this book and teach and preach its contents, they will see real gospel renewal in their ministries."

Purpose:

The purpose for this book is to help readers from diverse confessional backgrounds realize F. Leroy Forlines's maxim, which has characterized him personally and professionally: that biblical truth is for the whole life.

Turabian—Forlines, F. Leroy. Classical Arminianism: A Theology of Salvation. Edited by J. Matthew Pinson. Nashville, TN: Randall House, 2011.

Author bio:

F. Leroy Forlines is a prolific author having published The Randall House Bible Commentary: Romans, Biblical Systematics, The Quest for Truth, and Biblical Ethics. His monthly column "Christian Doctrine" was published in Contact magazine for 15 years. Forlines taught at Welch College for 50 years and served as adjunct professor. He has also served on the Commission for Theological Integrity since its inception in 1962 for the National Association of Free Will Baptists. He is adjunct professor of Theology at Russian Baptist Theological Institute at the Chelyabinsk Affiliate of the Moscow Theological Institute, under the auspices of Free Will Baptist International Missions.

Book Summary:

This book is a valuable contribution to the Arminian-Calvinist debate. Forlines and Dr. Pinson have worked together to provide a good resource from an Arminian interpretation. Forlines is known for his work on this subject, having previously published The Quest for Truth with Randall House in 2001. This new book takes the content related to the doctrine of salvation from that original work, arranging it in logical order in a more reader-friendly fashion. Dr. Pinson added his introduction to the work and edited the content related to the doctrine of salvation. This is an excellent resource for study of the Arminian view for those seeking to defend their theological position.

Endorsements:

I. Howard Marshall—"Professor Forlines here develops at greater length the approach already taken in his commentary on Romans. The result is a careful defense of a model in which God works to achieve salvation in human beings by 'influence and response' rather than by 'cause and effect,' a view which commends itself as doing better justice to the concept of a personal God entering into relationships with human beings as persons."

L. Igou Hodges—"Forlines has presented to the Christian community an excellent practical presentation and defense of the classical non-Wesleyan Arminianism that is rarely represented in the systematic theology sections of academic and church libraries, a challenge for Calvinistic writers to answer, and an example of the necessary and fruitful wedding of doctrine and life directed toward the zealous ministry of the gospel."

Book Summary: Youth ministry today has fallen on hard times. Many churches continue to employ the same methods that have become entrenched over the last few decades, while others are questioning the need for it at all. Michael McGarry explores the foundation of youth ministry in the Old and New Testaments and brings that together with church history in a compelling way. This contemplative and well-researched book provides a careful critique of youth ministry along with practical guidance for those serving in ministry. Julie and her husband Dave have been married 50 years and have three adult children and seven grandchildren.

Book Summary:

Promotes a biblical model for passing faith to the next generation, where the home is the primary source of spiritual development for children and the church comes alongside with training, equipping, resources, and encouragement.

Endorsements:

Dr. Rob Rienow—"God can use this book to transform your ministry and your family. These pages are filled with God's plan for parents and grandparents to take the lead in passing faith through the generations and for local churches to develop an intentional plan to partner with families for the sake of the Gospel. Julie writes with a love for God, a commitment to Scripture, a passion for families, and deep experience in ministry. If you are passionate about seeing the next generation follow Jesus, in your family and in your church, this book will sharpen your vision and encourage your heart."

Kirk B. Weaver, Amazon—"Julie brings both perspectives of being a children's ministry leader and parent to the discussion of family ministry. Throughout the book she recommends excellent resources on all aspects of where we are today and where we need to head moving forward. I have read most of these resources and can vouch for their importance in understanding the challenges and opportunities facing churches and families. The issue in a nutshell...both families and churches seek to pass the faith to future generations. The current system of relying primarily on children's ministry programs is not working. We need to get back to the biblical plan of families as primary teachers while the church provides support. Julie has helped both families and churches successfully navigate this critical realignment."

Ancient Text, Modern World: Building a God-Centered Worldview in a Me-Centered World

by Jonathan Denton, Ph.D. (2023)

Category: Christian Education, Spiritual Growth, Christian Ministry

Purpose:

A couple of generations ago, we were primarily ministering to students and families who were viewing life as "God-defined." In a God-defined world, they understood that God existed, God created, and God designed the world. Thus, our teaching focused on helping them know the God of the Bible, who they were searching for. We are now ministering to students who are immersed in a "me-defined" world. The foundation has shifted. Instead of searching for God's plan and purpose for their life, students begin with creating their identity and defining how they should live.

Book Proposal Guide

Randall House does not accept unsolicited manuscripts for consideration of publication. However, we do welcome proposals for Christian-based books in specific genres: family ministry, church history, theology, Christian living, Bible studies, reference, and academic. We do not publish devotionals, biographies, children's books, poetry, or fiction. We choose to review a book proposal before receiving a completed manuscript. After reviewing the proposal, we will determine if we will publish your work or prayerfully recommend you pursue other publishers.

Use this book proposal template as a guide to help create the best and most informative proposal possible. Please include each item. In deciding whether to pursue publication, we will consider the merits of your proposal and the quality of your writing. Include the following:

1. State the book's title and purpose. Make this concise; usually one paragraph is sufficient, up to 150 words. Explain what your proposed work will enable its target readers to do or know.

2. Include an author bio. Include your email address. Discuss your platform and circle of influence. Include writing experience, previously published works, and any experience relating to the subject of the book. List any marketing and sales opportunities you have established. Provide a brief statement of your faith experience and current church, denominational affiliation, and ministry involvement. Include a link to the statement of beliefs page of your church's website.

3. Estimate the length of the complete manuscript (in double-spaced pages in Times New Roman 12-point font, and in total words) and the date you anticipate completing it.

4. Summarize the main points of each chapter in an annotated outline or table of contents. A small paragraph is sufficient to convey the overarching point each reader will take from that chapter. If your work is not divided into chapters, expound on each major section in an outline.

5. Describe the primary audience of the book and any secondary audiences. Target audiences aid in marketing strategies. Determine who are the target and secondary audiences and how they will benefit from and use your proposed work. Also, determine what your work assumes the target reader will already understand and be able to accomplish.

6. Analyze the books already on the market with which it will compete and determine the need for your work. Use tables to compare the features and benefits of all books on the market that are similar to the work you propose. Express how your book will differ from those already on the market and appeal to target consumers.

7. Identify authorities in the subject field or genre of your work who may endorse or may contribute a foreword to your work. This is helpful in the marketability of the product, especially in the case of new authors. This list of endorsers also increases the credibility and marketability of your proposed work.

8. Describe the types and quantity of illustrations suggested for inclusion in the work. Indicate whether you believe illustrations, graphs, maps, charts, photographs, etc. to be beneficial to the completed work. Also, indicate which you can provide and which you expect the publisher to provide.

9. Provide the introduction and two or three complete chapters. Include introductory material that sets the tone and thesis, a chapter that continues the progression of your proposal, and a final chapter that concludes and summarizes. If your work is not divided into chapters, provide a generous sampling of the major points within the manuscript.

10. Indicate if you are submitting this proposal to other publishers at the same time.

Send your proposal (as a Microsoft Word file) to:
Books@D6family.com

The publication board meets quarterly to review proposals. Please allow up to 12 weeks after receipt of your proposal before inquiring about its acceptance.
